THE ISLAND

Madeira Island is the biggest of all islands of the archipelago with its name. All the islands of the archipelago are of volcanic origin, comprising Madeira Island, Porto Santo Island, the Desert and the Savage Islands.

Madeira Island has around 737 km<sup>2</sup> and the whole archipelago has a total extension of around 796 km<sup>2</sup>.

It's length between the points of São Lourenço (East) and of Tristão (West) is of 58 km and the width between the points of São Jorge (North) and of Cruz (South) is of 23 Km. The highest point is the peak named Pico Ruivo with 1861 meters.

The climate of Madeira Island is world wide known as one of the healthiest as per its low variation between the average temperatures in winter and in summer, varying only 4° C.

After the revolution of April 25th 1974 in Lisbon, which established a democratic regime, Madeira Island witnessed deep development, allowing autonomous powers to settle in and hence, becoming less dependent from Portugal in different levels.

The Autonomous Region of Madeira is divided into 11 councils or municipalities and 53 parishes.
